

Information System Audit and Assurance

Information technology is no more an enabler. It has become a part and information parcel of business processes. Consequently the asset composition of organizations has, with the concomitant vulnerabilities and risk, undergone significant changes. In the new scenario, stakeholders are apprehensive about the security of information systems. Assurance frameworks, and have issued guidelines for periodic information system security assessments.

