ABSTRACT

Rochmawati, Rifqi Nurlailli. 2015. Design Of AJISAKA Multimedia Application User Interface as Javanese Script Learning Media (SDN 02 Polanharjo Klaten, Case Study). Final Project. Visual Communication Design Departement. Faculty of Creative Industries. Telkom University.

Java, Java Script cultural products which should be preserved. The Government through the department of education to enter teaching Java script on learning the Java language from primary school to secondary school and above. Learning Java script is less due within one week of the children only get two hours, therefore it is necessary companion media in the learning process so that the children can learn actively. Multimedia learning can be defined as multimedia applications used in the learning process but it is also a multimedia can attract and foster children's interest in learning. Design method used is to perform data collection (interviews, observation, and literature study), and then perform data analysis with qualitative methods. From the analysis of data, multimedia applications didapatlah Ajisaka as a medium of learning support Java script to attract the interest to learn.

Keywords: User Interface, Media Education, Multimedia, and Java Script