

ABSTRACT

Means of home security systems in the community is one of the facilities that are still being developed. Improvement home security facilities not only include an increase in facilities but also improvements in the regulation of home security systems. When this has been a lot of home security system that has some excellent facilities. In the implementation of the operational activities of home security systems are some of the problems experienced by internal and external

In this final project designed of home security system, making this application using Prototype method. This application is based on linux, raspberry wheezy and raspberry pi, implemented using motion - detection, webservice and PHP, HTML programming language as a media liaison. With built this prototype, can help the operations of the home security system.

Keywords: Prototype, motion-detection, webservice, linux, python, html