

ABSTRACT

News program in Indonesia is growing rapidly create private television stations in Indonesia are competing for the attention of the public. Therefore, the presentation of news program must be packed in a professional and attractive as possible, both in terms of delivery of news, content, and appearance in general. Jak-TV, for example, as a local private television station in Jakarta, Jak-TV program presents news and events that are more specific and local problems will sharply capital city of Jakarta. One news program is a mainstay Jak-tv is "Ada Berita Petang". News program for the creation of an attractive and professional, it is necessary to note the steps in the production process of news programs. This study aims to determine and describe the process of news production that do Ada Berita Petang redaction as well as knowing what are the constraints and supporter in the news production process. This study used a qualitative approach with descriptive study method to analyze the object under study. Descriptive method is a method that only describe situations and events. The results showed that the program Ada Berita Petang passed through a production process that includes pre-produksi stages, production, and post-production. Pre-production, namely to gather and digest the information and determine the team on duty. Production, which is preparing the materials, the means, the cost, the implementing organization, and execution of production that began translating and creating a script, dubbing and editing process. While the post-production process starts with offline editing, online editing, and mixing or checking of the images, text, and voice is appropriate or not.

Keywords : Production Program, News, Local Television