

The Planning of Logistic Information System

(Case study : Sentosa Poultry Shop)

Abstraction

Along with the increasing of requirement of consumer of life chicken's livestock, chicken's feed, chicken's flesh and also egg of chicken livestock claim breeders of chicken so that upgrading his service. Information and goods start from consumer, pertinent company, come up with the relevant relationship expected by his clarity for the shake of steward service fluency to consumer. Related to logistics management hence required by the company mainstay in managing the product in company. If logistics management in the company have been managed better hence expected can improve the service as according to the requirement.

In this masterpiece, writer make a logistic information system based on web integrated with sms gateway service that expected can help the company logistics activity relate to the supply management, expedition, and transaction. This system exploit hardware and software of computer, internet connection, SMS Gateway tools, manual procedure, company business process, databases and decision making.

From the examination of inferential system result that this system have the character easy to comprehended and can run functionality in fulfilling requirement of company logistics activity. This system expected can increase the value of company service to the customer.

Keyword : Information system, Management of Logistic.