

ABSTRACT

Reviewing goods and services is an activity undertaken to help provide information between users or reviewers about goods and services. However, in Indonesia there is little concern and lack of interest of the people to review activities, so information about goods and services is still difficult to obtain. The solution provided is to create web-based applications that can help provide information about goods and services. This app is called Web App Reviews Goods and Services (RIPIU). This application will be separated into several modules, such as admin module, reviewer module, basic module and social networking & sponsor module. Meanwhile, the final project will focus more on reviewing the reviewer module. A reviewer is a term for users who review or review a good or service. In this reviewer module will provide some features such as reviewing available goods and services, providing reviews of new goods and services, providing information on available merchandise, conducting questioning among reviewers, managing profiles, viewing history reviews, and earning awards in accordance with the number of reviews already set for active reviewers.
