

ABSTRACT

Hospitals are vital health facilities in every region. As a means of providing health services, hospitals often have psychological effects on their users. Hospitals are considered creepy with all the medical treatments and tools used to support them. Physical form, color and layout of the room in a hospital is one factor that has an impact on the impression caused to the psychology of its users.

Maternal and Child Hospital is one of the hospitals whose existence is quite important considering the needs are different from the needs of the hospital in general. So also with Maternal and Child Hospitals in West Bandung area. Mother and Child Hospitals require special designs that are more sterile and have psychological effects according to their physical and psychic needs. Time-related activities that are temporary (non-permanent) require that the designs located in the area of the hospital, especially areas with healing functions and public areas should be able to be quickly captured and responded by the user. Through the method of analysis of subject and object design by conducting survey locations and interviews as well as interesting synthesis problems, interior design on Maternal and Child Hospital with a clear and fun atmosphere is considered to be important given the comfort and psychological patients and officers is one of the factors that affect the condition health.
