

ABSTRACT

In balancing life, humans need recreational activities that are different from their daily working environment. One of them is by going on a vacation to a tourist attraction. As the main gate of Indonesian tourism, Bali is the highest region visited by both domestic and foreign tourists. This is the background of the growth of many residential accommodation, such as resort hotels throughout the island of Bali.

With the strong culture and art among the people, it have become an attraction and a benchmark for tourists when visiting Bali. One of the things that a hotel designer can do is to design a place with an atmosphere that adopts traditional buildings.

Among the many buildings with similar styles, the potential arises to present an atmosphere that is different from most hotel styles, with the aim of providing a unique experience. But the thing that must be considered in resort hotels is the surrounding environment is the main consideration.

Therefore, the design of this resort hotel is carried out by appointing a different element of the surrounding environment without adopting the traditional building style, not forgetting its main function in maximizing the resting atmosphere for tourists and can provide a good space experience.
