

Abstract

Health is very important so that people can survive and carry out daily activities. Health can be interpreted as an important investment to support economic development and has an important role in poverty reduction efforts. To further improve health services in the community, a fast and maximum service is needed so that all communities are served well and quickly. By utilizing services through the application, it is expected to be able to improve services to people who want to conduct health checks to clinics, the results of this study can help reduce the number of queues that occur in the clinic and can help clinics in managing their services.

Keyword : Health, clinic, queue application.