

ABSTRACT

The existence of neglected children on the streets is a reflection of the lack of equal distribution of social welfare that occurs in the community, especially in the city of Bandung. Most of these children live and live in childcare institutions. The number of children's orphanages in the city of Bandung does not necessarily have the full feasibility for the foster children to live in. Amanah Children's Orphanage is one example of an orphanage-based child welfare institution that accommodates abandoned children, orphans and poor people. From a number of common problems that exist in children's orphanages, the new design plan for the Amanah Children's Orphanage is one of the best things done as a reference for the feasibility of residential homes, especially in the city of Bandung. The purpose of the interior design of the Amanah Children's Orphanage is to support the creation of social welfare institutions with facilities that are in accordance with the standards and pay attention to the activities of foster children so that they can support the development of foster children and are ready to jump into the community. This interior design uses the concept of "Kid Friendly Space" with the theme "Togetherness In Playful Home". Hopefully, they want to create comfort for foster children even though they come from different backgrounds, ages but they can still feel together in a pleasant home so that they can be easier to socialize.
