Anindita, Muhamad Ananda 2019. Designing Background for Short 2D Animation The Time That We Lost. Final Project, Visual Communication Design Study Program, Faculty of Creative Industries. Telkom University, Bandung.

In this modern era, changes in the infrastructure of the city as it has become a common thing done by the government, along with the advancement of civilization, certainly makes an area more developed as well, however, it seems that many young people of the current generation, who still do not know that the development of railroad infrastructure in Indonesia has been very developed.

Animation is a media that is able to display information through audio and visual so that it can show changes in time and place in the Bandung area in the past (1988) and Jakarta City in the present (2019), also to show the development of trains in the past and present. To support animation, a story, character and background are needed to support the message to be understood by the target audience
