

ABSTRACT

The media is currently experiencing a lot of developments that were initially conventional mass media into cyber media using the internet. The cyber media in 2019 reported a whole incident that occurred in West Papua caused by discrimination received by Papuan students in Surabaya and Malang. Tribunnews.com and Detik.com participated in reporting on the riots. This study aims to explain the differences in the construction of media reality by the two media. This study uses a constructivist paradigm with qualitative research methods. Framing analysis is performed using the Zhongdan Pan and Kosicki analysis models in terms of syntactic, script, thematic, rhetorical structures. The results of the study showed that the media Tribunnews.com contained the headline of the news that seemed to want to describe the events contained in the news content and described the character of the resource persons by including the core statement of the content of the news. While Detik.com seems short, concise, ignorant in the selection of titles, although there are titles that describe the character of the resource person with a core statement of the content of the news. The conclusion of this research is that there is a significant difference between the media Tribunnews.com and Detik.com in framing the news about the riots that occurred in Manokwari Regency, West Papua Province.
