The orphanage is a home for orphans where they lived and cared. With the large number of orphanages in Indonesia, it does not guarantee that the orphanage is suitable for foster children to live in. Widhya Asih's orphanage is one example of orphanage institutions that are scattered throughout the island of Bali. Activities at the orphanage include the development of children in matters of religion, education and skills. Based on the survey results there are some common problems found in the interior building of the Widhya Asih orphanage, therefore it is necessary to do a new planning on the interior of the orphanage so that it can be used as a benchmark of minimum eligibility for an orphanage. Behavior of children tends to differ along the development of their age so it is necessary to do further research on the character of a suitable space for children according to their age. By paying attention to the development and character of the child, the interior design of the Widhya Asih Orphanage aims to create a facility that is able to meet the needs of children according to their age so that the activities carried out can meet the physical, mental, and social needs of children.
