ABSTRACT

This application contains information about web-based Shipping. This application was created to help the system work on the company, where the application is to provide facilities that support the work that has been computerized.

The facilities provided by this application is to print code number or receipt for the costumer who sends his goods to the company and monthly report customer delivery. In addition there is an information system for users to find out information about goods and shipping companies.

Given its many problems that arise in the authors observe, it is expected that this application can help the employees in the company and provide the best solution.

Use technology to support information delivery operations that exist in the company.

Improve the effectiveness and efficiency that will ultimately improve service to customers.

Keywords: Delivery of goods, Expedition, information systems, Transshipment method