Abstract

According to a survey conducted by NACE (National Association of Colleges and Employers) in 2011 there were five soft skills work skills. Higher education institutions are required to be able to change what is happening in the world of work today. Very few campuses require soft skills development programs for students. Some have this program, however, not all lecturers are involved while the lecturer is one who is often involved with students. The student note-taking application can help students to develop students' soft skills. Lecturers who can record student errors are lecturers of courses taken by related students. After the lecturer deletes, the report will go to the academic supervisor, then the academic supervisor will provide coaching. By using the method of observation, analysis, design, implementation and testing in application development.
