

Abstract

Liminal Space is a psychological concept that comes from the Latin word Limen which means "threshold". In full, it means a threshold condition between what we already know and what we have just encountered. Liminal Space is usually depicted with a photo of an empty room that seems to be ignored by humans, so the photos of Liminal Space can also give a scary impression or an uncomfortable impression because we usually see a room full of humans or other living things.

The method used in writing this Final Project is the Practical Method, with this method the author can better understand the direct discussion of Liminal Space.

The purpose of this work is because the author wants to introduce a genre of photography that has recently been trending on the Internet, and also wants to experiment with this new genre in the world of photography. It is hoped that from this work the author can make other artists have new inspiration about other art photography themes.

The drawback of this work is the lack of several references to the Liminal Space photo theme because this theme is still very new and there are very few works that use this theme which makes it quite difficult to take this work without a reference that can be used as a foundation.
