

ABSTRACT

The discernment of society to pursue or find areas of expertise, in a structured manner with gaining a result in the form of reward is another definition of the word 'work'. It is not wrong for an individual to fight for all their rights to get a tip for them to survive. Good and bad jobs are often described as a reference for their level of mannerism, implementation of capitalism, and people's lifestyles of an individual. The overflow results and view execution of norms in society. However, what happen if a simple platform based on a website application can provide opportunities for each group of individuals to get reward as the result of doing a job from whatever they do in life without being tied to a particular position or contract?

Jobbie is here as an answer for every human being who dares to step out of their comfort zone and earn their income from the little things in life. Small things that are consider unqualify or inappropriate to get a reward for, due to the views and judgments of the nation's people. For this reason, the front-end display on the Jobbie website is designed and intended to give the impression that every human being has important values at each level of the same community group. The integration between the front-end and the back- end will be the centralization to unleash this idea. The testing method we carried out on this website-based application test is User Acceptance Testing (UAT). The Jobbie team hopes that Jobbie can be a solution where a small action is considered an essential and profitable activity further in the society, which will then helping us to form a better respect towards one another in this nation.

Keywords— Frontend, Website, User Acceptance Testing (UAT), Work Opportunity