

ABSTRACT

The rapid increase in the use of smartphones, especially with the android platform and the need for job vacancies information that is a trend in some circles such as the community and students, is no exception for people with disabilities. However, it is very difficult for people with disabilities to find jobs that match their abilities. People with disabilities are often underestimated by normal people so that they are very difficult to find a job. Therefore, by utilizing existing technology, an application called "Dissajob" was formed. Dissajob is an android-based application that aims to help people with disabilities in finding work through their smartphones by using the features available in the Dissajob application.
