

ABSTRACT

Banten is the westernmost province on the island of Java, Indonesia. This province was once part of West Java Province which later stood alone until now. In this study, we will discuss the history of the early establishment of Banten, beginning with the pre-Islamic era centered in an area called the Kingdom of Banten Girang. However, due to the lack of sources for information data and historical legacies, this has made people's understanding of pre-Islamic history in Banten very limited, even making the historical chronology seem to have disappeared. With this phenomenon, it is necessary to design a final project in the form of information media in the form of a website which is intended for the community, especially teenagers in Banten Province. This research and design uses qualitative methods as data collection with a literature study approach, observation, interviews, questionnaires and SWOT data analysis. It is hoped that the design of this website can make Banten people, especially teenagers, so that they know and understand the pre-Islamic history of the Banten Girang Kingdom which is the history of the early establishment of the Banten province. So that later this pre-Islamic historical information in Banten Girang will not be forgotten and can be passed on to the next generation.
