

ABSTRACT

Staycation is a vacation by staying in an inn or recreation place not far from the house. This staycation is also an activity to fill spare time to relax with various kinds of activities. One of the activities that can relax yourself is connecting with nature. Relationship with nature is a human need, where basically humans always depend directly on nature and nature is also able to restore human physical and psychological needs and reduce stress levels, especially for visitors who do staycations. However, based on the results of a survey conducted, there is no inn that offers interior design by prioritizing natural elements into the building in Bandung. The phenomenon that occurs can be used as a potential for designing a 4-star City Hotel located in the middle of the city by adopting a Biophilic Design approach which is expected to maximize tourist staycation activities to enjoy the facilities as well as the interior in the hotel.
