

ABSTRACT

A harmonious family is everyone's hope, having relationships and roles that can work as they should. But there are some families who end up unhappy. Broken home is what will happen if the family unity ends, is the initial condition of injury to family members, especially children. This can be caused by incomplete family relationships and the impact of insecurity, rejection, sadness, loneliness, anger and self-blame. Problems that are often experienced by children include growing up full of wounds, experiencing depression, experiencing a situation in the quarter life crisis phase which causes the child to have to make his choice and be responsible for his own choices without the love given by the whole parent. The purpose of this study is to provide a visualization of depression and fear from the impact of a broken home in the quarter life crisis phase and to provide support to audiences with similar conditions. The conclusion obtained is that not all families can survive until the end of time, there are families that end in broken homes. This incident became the beginning of pain for all who feel especially a child. They are the right targets of fractured family relationships, lose hope, hinder development and live life with a sense of solitude. This condition is expressed in the art of photography, showing the feelings of fear, loneliness, loss and deep wounds. A work full of anomie self-expression full of feeling alone.
