

ABSTRACT

Education in Indonesia has undergone very drastic changes, both systematically and in its management. This is due to the COVID-19 outbreak that has hit the whole world, including Indonesia. In this incident, the education sector and the economic sector in Indonesia were greatly affected, especially in the education sector where the government took firm steps by imposing an online system on teaching and learning activities. However, the online learning and teaching process creates a new problem, teachers and students must adapt to this online learning system. In its implementation, these online school activities require supporting devices such as smartphones or laptops, internet networks and teleconference media such as zoom and Google meet. With the declining economic conditions, not all parents are able to provide the facilities needed for this online school activity. The documentary “Sekolah Daring” discusses how the online teaching and learning system is considered ineffective, as well as finding solutions to problems faced by teachers.
