

ABSTRACT

Lembaga Bahasa LIA is an educational institution with teaching English and other foreign languages as its main focus. With regard to interior design, the success of the teaching-learning process, especially that of a language, is greatly affected by two important factors. The first is the design of the classroom, which should fit the study behavior of the targeted age group. The second factor is the use of certain colors and materials in the design in order to maintain the students' motivation and eagerness in carrying out their classroom tasks. Different age groups have different study needs. For this reason, classrooms need to be properly laid out in order to adequately meet the particular students' needs. Similarly, office rooms at LB LIA should be designed in a special way to create a more amicable and lively interaction among the employees. This kind of interaction will allow a number of the Core Values of Yayasan LIA to be incorporated in the employees' behavior. These values represent the concept of "esprit de corps", a shared spirit of unity and togetherness and strong emotional bond among LIA's workers, whereby the elements of work ethics such as integrity, collaboration, sharing professional information, mutual trust, and appreciating and respecting one other are upheld at all times.

Keywords: Classroom, Study Behavior, Office Room, Core values