

ABSTRACT

Sexual violence and sexual harassment cases against women are a never ending problem due to significant increase of number every year. There are various reasons behind the increasing number of the cases such as patriarchal system that has been a part of Indonesian society since early years, laws and regulation that are not in favour of Indonesian women, also the lack of education and awareness of Indonesian society regarding sexual violence and harassment issues. These reasons are what sparked the emergence of feminist movement in Indonesia such as #MeToo movement which aims to eliminate sexual harassment and sexual violence, as well as protect survivors of those act. The method used in this study is a qualitative method that collects data through interviews with Komnas Perempuan's commissioner, Coordinator of Community Participation, Assistant Coordinator of Social Media Management of Community Participation, and literature review. Through this research it can be interpreted that #MeToo movement had an impact on society on a small or large scale such as counselling services for survivors, providing opportunities for survivors to share their experiences, and encouraging the establishment of women's organizations that aim to eliminate violence and protect the survivors, as well as a driving force for the government to pass UU No. 12 Tahun 2022.
