The post office in Indonesia has a very important role in the delivery of correspondence in its time, the spatial arrangement is irregular, the interior design is at the central post office. The current post office design is still insufficient to serve because there are still large buildings left empty. With the redesign of this post office, it is hoped that it will be more attractive to fill and use empty buildings. To support this, a new functional and spatial design layout is needed that allows the addition of other features that can support the main functions of the post office, such as: Creative Hub, and others. As already mentioned, the current post office design is still inadequate. Post office reform is expected to create a more comfortable space design for post office users and visitors to transact and do activities at the post office. The Bandung Post Office located on Jalan Asia Afrika was designed by an architect named J. Van Gent. Formed in a period of 3 years 1928-1931.
