

ABSTRAK

Humans can be said as social beings because humans in their lives cannot be separated from the influence of other humans. Humans need other humans in their lives, because of this humans are called social beings. Social strata or what is also referred to as social stratification means the grouping of people or people into parts or layers of levels in life, both in terms of work, society and so on. This final project uses the experimental video production method, which is a branch of videographic production, is a form of modification, re-evaluating cinematic conventions and exploring non-narrative and alternative forms into traditional narrative forms or methods of processing them. Things that are experimental are closely related to matters of art, such as for example painting, dance, literature, poetry, or experimental film research which will later be in the form of works that result from the visualization of social strata in life and work environment

Keywords: Humans, Characteristics, Differences, Short Films