

ABSTRAK

A business hotel is a type of service that sells rooms, in order to meet the needs of business people and tourists (for recreation). So that two types of mutually sustainable activities are created between business guests and tourist guests (for recreation). Space circulation will be formed by the activities of each visitor. This problem can hamper the function of space and movement for each visitor. The purpose of this writing is to provide a comfortable space that can be used by visitors for different activities. This writing method uses literature studies related to the hotel business, visitor activities and balance in space. The results of the design show that by involving learning activities for each visitor it will create a space that is relevant, comfortable and safe for each visitor without any differences between room spaces.
