*Indonesia is a palm oil producing country and is the country that consumes the most cooking oil, especially among late teens. According to the Census, Bandung is filled with the majority of late teens. Bandung is the second largest producer of used cooking oil. However, Bandung residents still do not know how to process cooking oil that is no longer suitable for use. This is due to the lack of education about the adverse effects of using cooking oil on health and the aquatic environment. Therefore, the author provides education to late adolescents in using cooking oil periodically or called used cooking oil and become an additional income. To achieve this goal, the author conducted research using a qualitative case study method. Data collection techniques were carried out by direct observation, mixed interviews, questionnaires and literature studies. From the results of data collection that will be analyzed with descriptive analysis methods, it can help writers in making assets for background needs.
