ABSTRACT

Abstract : Islamic boarding schools serve not only as centers for religious education but also as places for character and personality development for students. This design aims to create comfortable and functional spaces based on user behavior. Through methods such as observation, interviews, questionnaires, comparative studies, and literature reviews, the design focuses on spaces such as classrooms, dormitories, laboratories, skill rooms, libraries, and communal areas. Ergonomics, lighting, materials, and privacy are key considerations in the design, aimed at supporting the development of Muslim female students who are character-driven, knowledgeable, and adaptable to the evolving times.
